

Importance of environmental studies

1. Environmental studies provide efficient use of resources in a balanced manner that the using of resources will not impact the environment in a negative manner.
2. Conservation through environmental study provides a way to conserve the environment and biodiversity and maintain sustainability in the environment.
3. The professionals with a degree in environmental-related subjects are aware of the ecosystem which leads to creating a harmonious interaction between the people and the environment.
4. Environmental studies provide higher priority to the environmental issue at the global and at the local level, it also creates an interrelation between the ecosystem and ecology.
5. Through environmental studies we are able to find the problems of wildlife and tried to solve the problem through using research and development (R&D).
6. Provide the alternative solution to the permanent problem.

7. Through environmental study we try to achieve this sustainable development goal which focuses on the sustainable use of resources through a common goal.

8. The environmental study provides planning with a focus on the execution of the action in a proper manner that should not disturb the environment and ecology.

Need of Public Awareness about Environment:

In today's world because of industrialization and increasing population, the natural resources has been rapidly utilised and our environment is being increasingly degraded by human activities, so we need to protect the environment.

It is not only the duty of government but also the people to take active role for protecting the environment, so protecting our environment is economically more viable than cleaning it up once, it is damaged.

The role of mass media such as newspapers, radio, television, etc is also very important to make people aware regarding environment. There are various institutions, which are playing positive role towards environment to make people aware regarding environment like BSI (Botanical Survey of India, 1890), ZSI (Zoological Survey of India, 1916), WII (Wild Life Institute of India, 1982) etc.
